

Artist of the Month—Kathi Scott

When I moved to The Villages 14 years ago, I never dreamed I would become an artist and be part of the Villages Art League.

My art technique is acrylic pouring. I do not use a brush, or a pallet – I turn the paint into a flowing liquid and combine colors to create designs.

My self-taught artist journey began with a more contemporary experience. When I first saw an acrylic pour on the Internet, I was intrigued. I began searching YouTube and found many artists demonstrating their techniques and recipes and how they accomplished their art. With much enthusiasm I purchased a few supplies and began creating acrylic flow art. After over two years of working in this medium, I continue to be excited when I pour a multi-layer of paints on the canvas and see the interplay of colors. I love using color, texture, and technique to create abstract images that convey a sense of energy on the canvas.

I find people are fascinated by the technique and want to try it themselves. For the past year I had been sharing the experience and teaching students until I had to put a hold on classes due to the COVID-19 virus and the necessity for isolation.

I participated in VAL's fall show at the Eisenhower Rec Center last year and last fall was accepted into the Inverness Festival of the Arts and the Rainbow River Art Festival in Dunnellon.
